THE PROBLEM

39.6 million small businesses in Nigeria can’t buy marketing they can trust

They sell on Instagram and WhatsApp. Here’s how they get marketing done today:

Pay a freelancer first

Found on WhatsApp or Instagram. No refund if the work is late, bad or never arrives.

Do it themselves

A flyer on Canva after closing time. Hours away from selling, and it shows.

Hire an agency

Out of reach. A $1–$15 job is too small for agencies and freelance marketplaces.

AI can do this work for a few dollars, but not on its own. Owners have no crypto wallet or USD card, and agents that spend money need limits they can’t talk their way past.

Every job is escrowed on Arc

01 Order

The owner describes the business and sees the price, team and delivery time up front.

02 Fund

They pay in USDC, or in naira by bank transfer. NairaDesk funds JobEscrow in USDC.

03 Work

11 AI agents do the job, paying for their own tools per call with x402 on Circle Gateway.

04 Decide

Only the customer can release payment. Reject, or a missed deadline, refunds the price plus our bond.

Proven on mainnet, Oct 20

A job missed its deadline. Five seconds later, JobEscrow refunded the price plus our bond. No request, no human.

OUR BIGGEST BLOCKER

Naira in, USDC out, at scale.

Most customers pay in naira by bank transfer. NairaDesk funds their USDC escrow on Arc from a float I top up by hand, and naira refunds are manual. Demand isn’t the limit. The float is.

A naira ramp

An on/off-ramp that settles naira straight to USDC on Arc, and back for refunds.

Gas sponsorship

So customers and agents never have to hold USDC for gas.

Working float

Enough USDC to keep jobs flowing while bank transfers settle.
